JUDICIAL.

In the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Mysore.
BANGALORE, 3rd June 1867.

Before J. R. KINDERSLEY, Esq., Offg. Judl. Commr.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 27—374 of 1867.

Chenrayah.

The Government of Mysore.

Judgment.

This is an appeal from the sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment passed by Colonel Dobbs, Superintendent of Nundidroog, on the 23rd of September 1864, on a conviction of dacoity, in case No. 12 of August 1864 on the file of the Session Judge.

The appellant pleaded not guilty, though it appears that he confessed in the talook.

In evidence at the trial it was stated that a dacoity had been committed in the house of the 1st witness, and that certain ornaments had been taken from the women of his family. But, except his confession in the talook, there was not the slightest evidence to connect the appellant with the crime.

In the absence of evidence the Session Judge took proceeding which I will describe in his own words. "11th prisoner denies his confession in the talook, is confronted with the 12th prisoner who affirms in a most decided manner that he was one of the party who planned the robbery in her house and moreover took a cumbly made up into a bag to carry the raggy which was to be stolen; he is confronted also with five other prisoners who give decided evidence against him—he has nothing to say."

While I am obliged to state the grounds of my reversal of the sentence in this case, I am aware that it is quite unnecessary to point out to the present Offg. Session Judge the illegality of the proceedings above related.

The evidence of an accomplice is proverbially open to suspicion, even when he is subjected to an oath, and his testimony is sifted by cross examination. But those tests were necessarily wanting in the statements of persons tried at the same time with the appellant; and when the appellant had pleaded not guilty and withdrawn his confession, it was most improper to confront him with other accused persons; and, as if their statements were evidence against him, to ask him again what he had to say.

The only evidence of the appellant's guilt was the confession which he made in the talook. It is quite possible that the talook officials may have used no influence to procure that confession, but I have generally considered it unsafe to rely on a confession made in the talook as sufficient in itself for conviction at the Sessions; nor does the record of the proceedings before
